Subject: "extensive pre-trial publicity" (emph. added)

To: whom it may concern

I recently discovered something about my direct appeal in 2008, the above phrase appears in my appeal, and only my appeal.

The phrase "pre-trial publicity" on the other hand appears in twenty-one other cases, one of them being Marvin v SOA. You remember him? He's the guy that shot those two cops in Hoonah. How could my case be more "extensive" than that? Mine wasn't on the national news, at all.

What this is, is an aggravator that only applies to me. I don't need to tell you what an "aggravator" is.

Allow me to illustrate: there is robbery, and then there is armed robbery. Now, there is pretrial publicity, and then there is extensive pre-trial publicity.

You have all singled me out just like everyone else does.

Please think about this when deciding my current appeal.

(Please forgive my not double-spacing)

Thank you, and have a nice day.
